

Here is a collection of photo ops provided to brides who wish to extend their picture memories by assigning key people to the task of getting the best of the day's offerings.

Sometimes professional photographers/videographers just don't get all the key shots of your wedding celebration. Not because we are lazy or disinterested, but because time, place or circumstances prevents them from doing so. This is where the brides can take some control over this important aspect of their planning and make sure that there are special people assigned to have cameras in the right place at the right time. Besides, what's wrong with some extra shots of the same targets but from different perspectives?
